

international level in all areas, and which presents itself at the Salone with a set of products that testify its cosmopolitan attitude and strong design identity. Research and innovation, starting from the core business of modular systems. "It's the research on details that makes the difference and that allows us to be far away from our plagiarizers. An example is the innovative Lema Air Cleaning System, a world record and a patent that, with the help of a nanotechnology, combined with a special UV lamp, generates a photochemical reaction, destroys pollutants and purifies the internal part of the wardrobe. The new catalytic oxidation technology comes from the aerospace, medical, hospital sectors ... and works on all the Armadi al Centimetro (made-to-measure wardrobe). When it comes to research on materials, Lema's chairman shows us the top of the Alamo table, by David Lopez Quincoces, in resin composite, pigmented marble powder and flakes of noble metals. Faroe is a collection consisting of hybrid seats and containers designed by Gordon Guillaumier. The talented new collaborator Chiara Andreatti has a design language that, at Lema, is considered 'new' by definition. In turn, Piero Lissoni, art director of the brand for over twenty years, is always 'new and smart', as shown by Atrium, open, bright and capacious cabinet: the exclusive SIDE + LESS is bold enough to avoid the side panels, making it the best choice in case of new project. www.lemamobili.com
